

CREDIT FOR PRIOR LEARNING

Individuals learn a great deal outside the walls of educational institutions. Certificate, associate or bachelor's degree students may have up to 25 percent of total program requirements granted for prior learning.

Credentials for admitted degree students who are currently enrolled are reviewed by faculty from participating departments who determine if this process is appropriate and make recommendations for awarding prior learning credit. Review is based on equivalency to courses listed in this catalog. Credit received for prior learning doesn't affect your GPA and is not considered residence credit.

The university will award transfer credit for specified national and state authorizations, certificates, credentials and/or examinations (see Transferring Credits) that do not need credit for prior learning review.
