The Alaska Native Language Program offers courses in Yup'ik, Inupiaq, Aleut and Athabascan languages spoken in the state. Major and minor curricula are offered in Central Yup'ik, the largest Alaska Native language in terms of number of speakers; and Inupiaq, the second largest. Regular courses are also available in Gwich'in Athabascan. UAF is the only university in the United States to provide such programs. Professional opportunities for those skilled in Alaska Native languages exist in teaching, research and cultural, educational and political development.

The Alaska Native language teaching program benefits from the research staff and library of the Alaska Native Language Center. Students have access to researchers who are world leaders in documenting Eskimo and northern Athabascan languages.

For educators in Alaska Native Languages

•ANL 199—Practicum in Alaska Native Education (CRN 73645)
