UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCH

According to Dr. Terry MacTaggart's recent report, "UAF enjoys a great opportunity to emerge as one of the nation's most important student oriented research universities..." by capitalizing on our strengths in research, the talent of our academic faculty and other factors, UAF can develop as one of the country's truly exceptional institutions. The College of Liberal Arts has great opportunity to build on our niche strength as one of UAF's largest colleges with undergraduate education as a key component of our mission which includes undergraduate research.

Several immediate opportunities for undergraduate research support are:

- Center for Research Services has funds available for undergraduates interested in conducting research during fall 2009 or spring 2010 semester. Projects from any discipline will be considered. Applications are due October 5, 2009. <http://www.uaf.edu/research>.
- Alaska EPSCoR has funds available for undergraduate fellowships to conduct research in the focus area of Resilience and Vulnerability in a Rapidly Changing North: the integration of Physical, Biological, and Social processes during spring 2010, summer 2010, or combination of spring/summer 2010. Applications are due October 5, 2009 <http://www.alaska.edu/epscor>

Forthcoming opportunities for undergraduate research support are:

- James R. Crook Memorial Fellowship to assist students conducting research in Environmental Health Sciences in the broadest perspective. All research methodologies acceptable. Applications will be due January 16, 2010 Information scholarships@uaf.edu or with amhartmann@alaska.edu
- NEW! CLA Dean's Undergraduate Research funds
Applications will be due the end of Fall 2009 for research to be conducted during spring 2009. Up to 50 awards of $1,000 are anticipated to support direct costs of undergraduate research projects (materials & supplies, field travel, copying costs, informant fees, and so forth) Full details very soon!
