Alaska Dispatch News

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 2017

WE ALASKANS

VILLAGES SCRAMBLE TO SAVE A DYING LANGUAGE

Alaska Dispatch News

ASSEMBLYMAN TRIES TO GET UBER BACK TO ANCHORAGE

Alaska lost another 9,000 jobs in 3rd quarter

Oil sector hammered with a 26 percent drop, as state endures 4 quarters of decline.

Alex DeHuff

Alaska Dispatch News

WALKER

WALKER

New King Cove road act, movement of ANWR could be reeler for Alaska.

Nathaniel Herz

Alaska Dispatch News

Kuskwam schools make push to create homegrown teachers

Bethel-centered district invests $500K to educate local staff to battle turnover at its 27 schools

Isabelle Dyment has served as a nontraditional classroom teacher in the Lower Kuskokwim School District and is one of a handful selected to be paid while going to college full-time to earn her teaching degree.

Lisa Demer

Alaska Dispatch News

OPPORTUNITY HITS...FOR QUESO FUNDIDO

Nothing kicks off game day better than a big, sizzling bubbling cheese and spiked with chilies. D4

Alaska Dispatch News

TRAVEL BAN

Trump officials move to restore travel ban

Meanwhile, some people from listed countries try for U.S.

Mark Landler

New York Times

TRAVEL BAN

Travel ban: Judge’s stay of Trump order triggers race to enter US.

The brief notice of appeal came as the days in which the government could p

Alaska Dispatch News

IMMIGRATION

Mark Landler

New York Times

BETHI - When teacher Isabelle Dyment found herself in front of a classroom of kindergarten students five years ago, she felt nau

Lisa Demer

Alaska Dispatch News

REPUBLICAN-LED CONGRESS

Many Paths

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 2017

ADN.COM

WE ALASKANS

VILLAGES SCRAMBLE TO SAVE A DYING LANGUAGE

Alaska Dispatch News

ASSEMBLYMAN TRIES TO GET UBER BACK TO ANCHORAGE

Alaska lost another 9,000 jobs in 3rd quarter

Oil sector hammered with a 26 percent drop, as state endures 4 quarters of decline.

Alex DeHuff

Alaska Dispatch News

New King Cove road act, movement of ANWR could be reeler for Alaska.

Nathaniel Herz

Alaska Dispatch News

Kuskwam schools make push to create homegrown teachers

Bethel-centered district invests $500K to educate local staff to battle turnover at its 27 schools

Isabelle Dyment has served as a nontraditional classroom teacher in the Lower Kuskokwim School District and is one of a handful selected to be paid while going to college full-time to earn her teaching degree.

Lisa Demer

Alaska Dispatch News

Nothing kicks off game day better than a big, sizzling bubbling cheese and spiked with chilies. D4

Alaska Dispatch News

TRAVEL BAN

Trump officials move to restore travel ban

Meanwhile, some people from listed countries try for U.S.

Mark Landler

New York Times

TRAVEL BAN

Travel ban: Judge’s stay of Trump order triggers race to enter US.

The brief notice of appeal came as the days in which the government could p

Alaska Dispatch News

IMMIGRATION

Mark Landler

New York Times

BETHI - When teacher Isabelle Dyment found herself in front of a classroom of kindergarten students five years ago, she felt nau

Lisa Demer

Alaska Dispatch News

REPUBLICAN-LED CONGRESS

Many Paths
WALKER: Some of his positions have been at odds with Trump's vision

Secretary of the Interior David Bernhardt ordered the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to remove a road through a national wildlife refuge in Alaska, part of the Trump administration's plan to allow oil and gas development.

The department's announcement came after Interior Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt, who supported the idea in March, reversed his decision.

"I remain committed to supporting our conservation efforts on Alaska's National Wildlife Refuges," said Interior Secretary David Bernhardt.

But Walker has also taken some positions that have been at odds with the Trump administration. She has opposed the expansion of the Medicaid program under the Affordable Care Act and the construction of a pipeline through the Izembek National Wildlife Refuge.

She has also been a vocal supporter of the state's coal industry and has opposed efforts to reduce methane emissions from oil and gas drilling in Alaska.

Walker's stance on health care has also been at odds with Trump's. She has opposed Medicaid expansion and has been a vocal advocate for the state's rural health care providers.

She and her husband, John Walker, have a long history in Alaska politics. Walker served as the state's attorney general and as a member of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Walker's campaign committee has been targeted by political advocates who believe she is too close to the Trump administration.

Walker's campaign has been criticized for not disclosing the sources of funding for its advertising campaigns.

The Walker campaign has also been criticized for its use of social media to spread false information about its opponent, former state Sen. David Wilson.

Walker has been a vocal supporter of the Trump administration and has been accused of being too close to President Donald Trump.

Walker's campaign has been criticized for its lack of transparency and has been accused of engaging in questionable campaign practices.

The Walker campaign has also been criticized for its use of social media to spread false information about its opponent, former state Sen. David Wilson.

Walker's campaign has been criticized for its lack of transparency and has been accused of engaging in questionable campaign practices.

Walker's campaign has been criticized for its lack of transparency and has been accused of engaging in questionable campaign practices.

Walker's campaign has been criticized for its lack of transparency and has been accused of engaging in questionable campaign practices.

Walker's campaign has been criticized for its lack of transparency and has been accused of engaging in questionable campaign practices.