The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) will host an information session about upcoming federal employment and internship opportunities for Summer 2016. Opportunities are available to undergraduate, graduate college students, and recent graduates. Representatives from several federal agencies will be present to provide information as well.

Date:
December 4, 2015
8:00 am – 5:00 pm

Location:
U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service
Alaska Regional Office
Anchorage, AK

Transportation and lodging (as necessary) will be provided.

Objective:
Provide participants an overview of the mission and programs of the FWS, and the range of skills needed to pursue federal careers in natural resource conservation. The information session will also provide participants with information on how to obtain valuable work experiences while still enrolled as a student.

Qualifications:
Participants must be enrolled in degree programs majoring in:
- Natural Resource Management
- Biological Sciences
- Environmental Science
- Environmental Education
or related disciplines and interested in exploring future employment opportunities with the FWS.

Participants will have the opportunity to:
- Learn about upcoming FWS conservation internships and other federal career employment opportunities
- Receive hands-on training and information on writing government resumes and interviewing for Federal jobs
- Network with federal professionals

Application/Nomination Process:
Students are requested to submit the following items to the Point of Contact:
1. Resume
