DEPARTMENT OF ALASKA NATIVE STUDIES AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT
University of Alaska Fairbanks
PREPARED TO SHAPE MANY WORLDS

The Department of Alaska Native Studies and Rural Development M.A. program is designed to educate leaders who understand the dynamic relationship of rural Alaska with the global economy and who have professional skills in areas of leadership, business development, administration and conflict management. Graduates typically take positions with tribal and municipal governments, fisheries, tourism, Native corporations, regional health corporations or non-profits, state/federal agencies, or other private businesses.

Graduate degree students gain a broader theoretical understanding of development processes in Alaska and the circumpolar North. Graduate students complete a thesis or applied community development project, and have opportunities for international study and research.

Students can earn the M.A. degree either on the Fairbanks campus or through distance delivery.

M.A. PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

• Educate leaders with a broad understanding of interrelationships between rural communities and the dynamic global economy;
• Offer a quality program of advanced study for place-committed students in rural Alaska, combining personal networking with cutting-edge distance course delivery;
• Build strong ties to employers and leaders in rural Alaska to support program relevance and student success;

“DANSRD has given me an amazing opportunity to not only learn about my Gwich’in culture and language, but has also given me the tools to be a scholar, a planner, a successful professional, a mentor and an Indigenous researcher. I’ve always believed that Education is one of the most important values taught to us from our Elders. Both Indigenous and Western education can help build a stronger foundation for the future.”
