RURAL ALASKA HONORS INSTITUTE
1993 YEARBOOK

RAHI
Prepares You for College.

Take the Challenge!
Rural Alaska Honors Institute • University of Alaska Fairbanks

Return to Denise WALTERS, RAHI
This summer a smaller than usual student body came to the UAF campus to participate in the 11th year of the Rural Alaska Honors Institute (RAHI), smaller, but spirited and talented indeed.

Only a fraction of the 80 applicants to RAHI were able to be accepted. A number of qualified applicants had to be turned away, due to a decline in the RAHI funding based caused by a declining UAF budget. RAHI is entirely supported by the UAF College of Liberal Arts, so, when they're hit, RAHI gets hit.

There is support by university leaders to ask the 1994 Alaska State Legislature for increased funding for RAHI, which, if successful, would restore a portion of the years of budget cuts which amount to well over $100,000. Despite these cuts, RAHI has grown to meet changing needs of students, such as the addition of a college freshmen program for graduated seniors in which students take UAF core curriculum credit courses that are required for graduation. We've struggled to meet rising costs at the same time that our support has declined.

Fortunately, students tell us directly, and through their fine academic performance, that RAHI continues to offer a high quality academic program. But we are at the point where increased funding support is needed in order to continue to offer a great RAHI for great students who seek an accelerated start for college.

This means that our RAHI alumni - you, the 1993 RAHI students, and staff too, will have to become active as you return home to finish high school, or as you head off to college or elsewhere. We need your voice to help us to build support for the increased funding request to be made to our legislature. We need you to mention the RAHI program wherever and whenever you can, to news reporters who interview you, to your community leaders, to your state legislators - representatives and senators, and to your Native corporate leaders as well.

RAHI, this summer, received a gift of $10,000 from the Cook Inlet Region, Inc. Native corporation in Anchorage, a wonderful, needed gesture for which we are very thankful that we hope will be repeated by other regional Native corporations, and that will help RAHI to restore the luster to accommodate worthy college bound Native students who seek our help, to grow and change to meet their needs.

You, the 1993 RAHI graduate, can do your part back home. Give RAHI CREDIT whenever and wherever you can, mention it in your student speeches, your letters, your conversations, at conferences and conventions, to fellow students, teachers and parents, and certainly make these points to your state senator and representative. Push RAHI. Give it the spotlight. Ask for support.

No one can do this better than the RAHI family itself.

Will you help?
A Short History of RAHI

RAHI was organized in 1982 at the request of Native leadership of the Alaska Federation of Natives (AFN) and others. Meeting on the UAF campus, they asked university leaders to take some unusual steps to offer orientation to college and academic enrichment for college-bound rural Alaska Native high school students for purposes of better preparing them to succeed in college.

As an outcome of this call for action from Native leaders concerned about student college success, RAHI came into existence and opened its doors to rural students for the first time in 1983. It was a four week program then, but 1984 saw expansion to six weeks to be able to offer more complete academic programs, and 1991 witnessed the addition of an 8-week, college credit session for post seniors we call "RAHI college freshmen."

RAHI has operated every year since 1983. Freshmen and the 6-week "seniors" live, and study together in the RAHI dorm, however their courses are considerably different.

An instructional staff made up of university professors and other master teachers provide instruction. A residence hall staff of tutor/counselors who are UAF students and an adult residence hall supervisor also live and work with the students.

A program of rigorous academic activity combines with social, cultural, and recreational activities to make up the RAHI program of early preparation for college. Students are purposely stretched beyond their comfort levels academically and socially to prepare for the big step from home or village to a large culturally western campus.

At RAHI, great care is taken to encourage students to maintain their own distinctive cultural values while adapting to the academic and social environment of college life. Career and lifestyle choices are examined, role modeling and positive peer pressure are encouraged, academic skills are sharpened, study habits and time management strategies are developed, and bonding with other students and staff create potential life-long support networks. RAHI becomes a family with close, supportive relationships between all students, and also between students and dorm and teaching staff. We rely upon each other. This is a key to survival in college.

All of this effort and activity support the principal goal of RAHI, which is to promote academic success in college. RAHI has hosted over 400 students in our first 10 years. Over 60% of RAHI's alumni have entered four year college academic programs. Most take, or are taking, more than four years to complete their academic degree. Some alumni have gone to college at schools other than UAF, while more are enrolled here.

Her family name was "Naughty by Nature". Her favorite class is math 101. Aguaq, pizza, cheeseburgers, French fries, Thai food are her favorite food. The hardest thing for her was keeping up in Guthridges class. From RAHI she gained knowing that she can make it through college if she tries hard enough. Barbara would most likely be found down playing the piano or at Pauline's room. Her one wish is to stay young forever but to grow in knowledge. She would like to be a Siberian white tiger because we hardly know about them and because of it's intelligence and aggressiveness.

Engineering

"Engineering was a good specialty course. We did and learned lots of neat things like study lens, wedge pore and "other kinds of ice formations. I liked the field trips and the Musk-ox and caribou, but I didn't like the mosquitoes."

"I wasn't really interested in engineering at first, but when RAHI offered it, I took up the class to give it a try. I was only curious about the class. Now I'm very interested in engineering and may think about it as a major. This class is wonderful."

"The engineering specialty class was a fun class, I learned about permafrost, soil, and other aspects of engineering in Alaska. It was a fun class. The field trips were cool, and class information was all right. The instructor was very helpful."
"In Engineering, the students mostly do work in subjects like math and science. Also, we went to a lot of field trips like the permafrost tunnel, the Musk-ox farm and also to Fort Wainwright. Engineering was the most fun subject I had."

"Engineering, to me, was the most fun course that I took during RAHI. I believe that I learned more in this class than I did in any of the others."

Library Skills

The freshmen had an option of taking library skills. Eight freshman took this class along with their other required classes. Lisbeth, Chris, Kim, Aaron, Debbie, Bonnie, Carl and Melvin took this class. This was a pass/fail course. Students were given workbooks about the library, and they had to be completed by the end of the course. Students had the option of taking parts of the test home during the six week class. At the very end a final was given in class. Overall this class will help in the future.

Twin Bears Lake was once again the site of RAHI's three-day camping excursion and Fun Olympics. Several students and staff biked to or from Twin Bears Lake. Fun Olympics was held the second day and pitted the four family groups against each other. Some of this year's events included the Orange Pass, the Egg Toss, the Watermelon Dunk, and the Canoe Race. The Watermelon Dunk was a new event which involved four players per team, the lake, a Crisco-caked watermelon, and two intertubes. The object, of course, was to make the watermelon pass through the intertubes. However, because the water was extremely cool, only three points were scored in three ten-minute games, with one sudden-death overtime.

Swimming

Swimming class requires water so that you can try new things like: standing in the water, placing your face in the water, rhythmic breathing, treading water, and the crawl stroke...and other necessary things that make water not so fearful.

Math 103

There are only five students in Math 103, and of course the instructor, Chuck Cooper. The five students are: Ryan Anderson, Matthew Berlin, Kit Blair, Wayne Johnnie and Kyan Olanna. Our class is just basically about Algebra one and two, no trigonometry and we are getting into Calculus math.

Matthew Berlin

Math 070/102

A majority of the RAHI students were in this class. Our instructor Charles Cooper; known to his students as Chuck, was a great teacher. This class was equivalent to High School Alg. II. We learned many things, for example, exponents, radicals, polynomials, functions and graphs, and a lot more. A mathematical saying he uses a lot is:

(A blob) * the same(blob) = (blob) squared.

Overall I enjoyed this class very much.

George Guthridge using martial arts on his students.

English 111, with George Guthridge, was the best English class I've ever taken. I learned a lot about writing that I'm sure will carry through all my years of college. We were required to write four papers; a problem paper, a product paper, a thesis paper, and an argumentative paper.

Business Specialty

The 1993 Business Specialty class, taught by Jacob Joseph and Rose Kairaiiuak, learned about sales promotion from Dale Fodness, a special guest speaker, and how different businesses operate. We watched videos of American business starting operations in foreign countries, such as Japan and the Soviet Union. To discover how businesses are operated, we visited Fred Meyers, the movie theater, Hot Licks ice-cream shop, and the Riverboat Discovery. Our final presentation was aimed at helping to prevent AIDS in Alaska.

Native Studies

In Native Studies, we heard the trials of the Native American people, and what an important role our ancestors have played in the development of the United States government. During class we discussed the material covered in Exiled in the Land of the Free and How the West was Lost; we looked into how the Indian Nations set up the first democracy, Native sovereignty, and the struggle of Indian nations to defend their lands. This course encouraged the reclaiming of Native rights and the preservation of culture; we learned United States history from the Native viewpoint, and about ourselves.

Writing 101, with George Guthridge, was a useful class to all students, whether planning to attend college or not. This class emphasized how to write a thesis paper, but also touched on grammar, argumentative papers, editing, and techniques for surviving college courses. The major assignment of the course was to write a four to six page (1000-1500 word) thesis paper on bears.

Flower

Something there is in beauty which grows in the soul of the beholder
like a flower:
fragile -
for many are the blights
which may waste
the beauty
or the beholder -
and imperishable -
for the beauty may die,
or the beholder may die,
or the world may die,
but the soul in which the flower grows
survives.

Eskimo Drums

The Drums Beat,
My Heart sings
A song of happiness.
The Drums Beat,
My feet move,
Bringing me Alive.
The Drums Beat,
And I am one
With the Spirits.
Dancing, Singing,
And Rejoicing of our Life.
Our Hearts Beat
And are the Drums.

Statues of Past

At the heart of the storm,
Imaginings become real.
Memories shape into Lovers, Friends.
The sand beneath grips at
My soul, while it burns below.
I move on, each step scalding hot,
Feet scream in protest,
I move on,
The past is left behind,
Seen on the horizon are Statues.
In the beach in front uncut stones
Stand waiting.
My memories,
My Life,
My Love,
Are cut into these stones.
They will get worn down with time,
But they will last forever.
My footsteps are lost,
My memories guide me
Through the future
Loves,
Life,
Pain.

All is dark, then a flash emerges.
It hovers in the air, teasing me.
I follow quickly, as if in a trance,
and enter a circle of strange light.
The light creates a fear inside me,
as well as a hellish illusion.
Skeletons running to and fro,
in preparation for my arrival.
I continue to move forward slowly.
A great hall approaches from the left.
Enormous pillars support the hall
and are carved elaborately.
As I am seated at the table,
an enormous figure swoops downward.
He touches me with a horrid finger
and sends a quick pulse through my body.
I begin to shiver tremendously
as a pain increases inside of me
until I scream in anguish.
Then with a flash of light, all is dark.
