Alaska Classics

Welcome to Alaska Classics. Please enjoy these interpretations of the Great Land's unique sense of place and its fascinating residents. We hope you can delight in the array of landscapes, portraits and village scenes.

Why have we filled this space with so many artworks hung so close together? Fairbanks' art enthusiasts urged us to exhibit more of our paintings by beloved Alaskan painters that were in storage. The paintings, secured in proper cases and lighting, can be publicly viewed and studied altogether.

The Alaska Classics gallery shows most of our paintings by Sydney Laurence, Eustace Ziegler and Ted Lambert, and some by other important Alaskan artists of the 19th and 20th centuries. Other artworks will be shown on a short term basis so that more of the museum's collections can be viewed.

This booklet contains basic information on individual artworks. You can search for further information on paintings in Case 36 and Case 37 on the Computer Resource Station in this gallery. Links will show you related materials and historical information available via Alaska's Digital Archives. The Digital Archives website is <http://vilda.alaska.edu>

About the collections shown in Alaska Classics

Fine Arts Collection

The fine arts collection represents an invaluable record of Alaska's cultural richness and aesthetic diversity and includes over 3,600 works of art. The collection is composed of all major mediums of visual expression, with the primary focus on Alaska's art - historic though contemporary. Works in the collection date from the 1870s to the present and encompass a broad range of styles and techniques – from representational to abstract and from literal to conceptual. To make full use of the art collection's potential, the Museum offers a multitude of exhibitions, educational programs, and public events. The collection serves as an important tool for scholarly research in the art history of Alaska and for classroom support in the study of drawing, painting, photography, printmaking, and sculpture.

Ethnology & History Collection

The ethnology collection contains more than 12,000 objects made and used by Alaska Natives from the mid-1800s to the present. The history collection contains more than 2,600 objects of Western manufacture representing Alaska's history from the Nome gold rush through the present, including goods, folk art, tools, firearms, Russian-American material, aviation, equipment and other memorabilia.
