

CARTOONING & COMIC ART I

ART F195 (3 credits)

May 26 - July 1, Monday-Thursday, Fine Arts 317

Jamie Smith, Instructor nuggets@alaska.net

Course Description

An introductory studio class on sequential art - telling a story with images and text - that focuses on the basic elements of creating cartoon and comic art features. Exploration of all stages in production with an emphasis on the conceptual and developmental process, as well as drawing and storytelling skills. No previous art experience necessary.

Objectives

Includes materials and techniques, with in-depth exercises in visual and narrative techniques on combining words and pictures, page & panel breakdowns, thumbnailing, reference & research, character development, writing & editing. Covered are single-panel/gag cartoons, strips, editorial cartooning, storyboarding, comic books (scripting, penciling and inking), graphic novels, caricature and humorous illustration.

There will be lectures, demonstrations, handouts, slide-shows, in and out-of-class exercises, field trips, guest presenters, reviews of work-in-progress and critiques of major assignments, and a final class publication of selected student work.
