In implementing standards, supervisors must be mindful of individual rights and academic freedom. This Code of Conduct serves as a guide in such matters to help determine when action might be appropriate due to employee behavior, including but not limited to:

B. Unsatisfactory Performance

C. Insubordination

D. Absenteeism, (e.g., unauthorized leave or variation from work hours, or failure to promptly notify supervisor of unanticipated absences).

E. Violation of Law, Regents’ Policy, or University Regulation, including published rules and procedures, or aiding a violation thereof. See, e.g., The Alaska Executive Branch Ethics Act at AS 39.52 and http://www.alaska.edu/hr/forms/hr_ethicsforms/; Policy and Regulation 02.07 on Information Resources; Policy and Regulation 02.09.020 on Possession of Weapons; Policy and Regulation 04.02 on General Personnel policies; Policy and Regulation 04.10 on Ethics and Conduct. Regents' Policy and University Regulation are at http://www.alaska.edu/bor/policy-regulations/.

In summary, employees must not engage in, condone, or have to tolerate inappropriate behavior. If an employee has concerns about any behavior, he or she should be encouraged and welcomed to talk with a supervisor, to the director of Human Resources, or to the Office of the General Counsel.
