

Miranda Wright serves as director of UAF's Department of Alaska Native Studies and Rural Development. She has served on the Doyon, Limited board of directors since 1995. She has held the office of chair and currently serves as the board treasurer. Wright chairs the finance and investment board committee and serves on the Doyon Government Contracting, Inc. board. She chairs the Community Advisory Board for Holland America/Westours and is active on the Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Native Education. She has both a BA and MA degree in Anthropology from the University of Alaska Fairbanks. She served as the executive director of the Doyon Foundation from 1995-2002 as well as serving on numerous boards and commissions focused on economic development and native education. Ms. Wright is Koyukon Athabascan and a member of the Nulato tribe. She and her husband Gareth make their home in Fairbanks along with a large extended family.