Nurturing a Spirit of Success

1994 Yearbook

Boy, Have Things Changed (well, some things) !! by Jim Kowalsky, RAHI Director

RAHI lost its innocence in 1994 with a change to college credit for all students, juniors and seniors. With the granting of credit we give up the system of grading used since 1983, the letter grade and the effort grade.

The effort grade was a pretty good deal for students who were willing to risk taking a really tough or unusual course, one they might never try under the normal straight letter grade system. That's because it was the effort that counted, even more than the letter grade.

But, alas, RAHI "succumbed" to market forces and switched over to the granting of UAF credit for all courses in Mathematics, Study Skills, College Success Skills, English, Native Studies, and TUMA Native Dance, a new RAHI course this year. Some RAHI Freshmen also took UAF core curriculum courses from UAF Summer Sessions. Seniors increased their stay at RAHI from six to seven weeks.

For RAHI this was a large leap. With it came many problems, some anticipated, others unforeseen, such as dropping and switching to audit, trying to fairly identify and award students with top GPA among uneven credit loads, and prioritization by seniors of their effort between credit and the specialty courses which remain non credit.

But, the change to credit is also a signal that RAHI changes to meet changing needs of students, while retaining its original overall goal, to improve opportunity for college success. The RAHI credit track allows students to enter college as full time freshmen with anywhere from eight to 16 or more college credits already earned - the equivalent of more than one semester.

If RAHI alumni continue as full time students at UAF they might further decrease the overall time they need to spend earning a degree by participating in RAHI Summer Momentum, a summer credit, work/study arrangement. We were able to start RAHI Summer Momentum at the last minute this summer as an experiment with one RAHI alumna and with support from UAF Rural College (whether or not RAHI Summer Momentum receives future support is presently unknown, however, but interested alumni should keep their eyes on this possibility).

All in all, this summer, the summer of major RAHI change, was a good effort: over 300 credit hours earned by students who already are building a college transcript of credit hours toward a baccalaureate degree, new strategies for studying, learning to live away from home on a college campus, improved math and reading scores, a network of new supportive friends among peers and staff, and a strong finish for most students overall.

I want to thank all students (parents too) and staff for giving seven and more weeks of your summer. Keep RAHI in mind if you're a senior. When you talk to the press, write for your school paper or make a speech, mention RAHI, describe it, pass the word along. Throw your hat into the ring by applying again for 1995. If you're in college this fall, here or elsewhere, or if you have other plans, keep in touch with RAHI. Let us help you if we can. Call on us. Make your best effort this fall.

Thanks again and good luck!

Jim Kowalsky
Two Rivers, Wisconsin
Program Director

Jim was born January 2, 1936. His favorite sport is bicycle racing. Fresh vegetables and fruit are his favorite foods. His favorite activities include bicycling and bicycle-commuting to work. He would most likely be found at home with a book. Jim's one wish would be to have some time all to himself. This time could be spent on a long bicycle trip.

Spirit Masks of the Old Coastal Bering Sea Yupik Culture "Two Headed Walrus"

The Coastal Bering Sea Yupik people believed that every object, whether living or natural, had some form of a spirit called Inua. There were people chosen to communicate with the spirit world known as "Angalkut" (ah-ng-ah-lth-good) or medicine men/women. The Angalkut also designed the mask in their own perception of a spirit. The walrus is for physical and moral strength.

The spirit, portrayed as a human face, is shown on the back or the front of the two headed walrus. The spirit of strength is the center of the mask, and everything revolves around it, and as being continuous and emulating. The old person or the elder at the top is the source of all information and where the physical and moral strength comes from.

The sticks attached to the mask, the two hoops, and the appendages (small figurines attached around the mask) symbolize many different things.

The 4 diagonal sticks attached to the mask, and base support for the appendages and the hoops symbolize the four seasons: Fall (upper left) Winter (upper right); Spring (lower right); Summer (lower left). The vertical and horizontal sticks attached to both hoops represent the four directions: North (top); South (bottom); West (left); and East (right). The inner hoop represents the earth, and the outer, the skies and the universe.

Lastly, various appendages represent certain themes: Circles, some with dots, symbolize both the male and female power symbols. For the male, a solid dot at the center; female, a small circle at the center. The surrounding dots also symbolize the four directions and seasons.

-Ossie (c) 1994

The yearbook staff would like to give a special note of recognition and gratitude to Ossie Kairaiuak who created all the artwork and mask designs for this year's yearbook. Ossie is a member of this year's dorm staff and has made several significant contributions to the program as a whole. He is especially well known for his wake up calls in the morning and pleasant personality as well as being a very talented artist.
