Peter Apokedak III (Levelock)

Born: 1986 (November 16) a.k.a: iSonahuk

Family Group: The Seedlings

I gave up 6 weeks to help boost my moral when it comes to school. I like to listen to music, read, and what not. In 5 years, I will pursue a double major in Medicine and Music. In 10 years, I would own a small business. My favorite thing is the fact that I made the valuable decision to devote myself to RAHI. My least favorite thing about RAHI is all the heat and smoke.

Gavin B. Atchak (Chevak)

Born: 1986 (February 13) a.k.a: Yay-Yay

Family Group: Oat Power!

In five years, I will attend a university in Alaska and in ten years...well...you'll see. I like travelling, hitchin' on the web, dancing, 4-wheel riding, and #33. My favorites about RAHI were the store runs and the fact that it's six weeks long. I came to RAHI to get college credits. My least favorite were the term papers and essay exams.

Dallas P. Chayalkun (Chevak)

Born: 1986 (September 7) a.k.a: Imgalria

Family Group: Sam's Club

My name is Dallas. I am from Chevak. I like to play basketball and football. I like to cruise on my four-wheeler and snowmachine. One of my goals is to become a pilot and fly bush planes.

Rebecca S. Church (Quinhagak)

Born: 1987 (September 17) a.k.a: Becca

Family Group: Rockstars

Some things that I enjoy are running and beading jewelry. One of my biggest goals is to get a Master's degree in Education or Business Management and then travel the world. The amount of school work given at RAHI is intense. There are many students that have their mind set on being the best. This accelerates my motivation to do well. I am not really fond of having to spend another six weeks in school, but it is all worth it.

Robin M. Demoski (Barrow)

Born: 1986 (November 7)

Family Group: Yupik Princesses

My hometown is Barrow, Alaska. I am attending Rural Alaska Honors Institute in order to get college credits. My hobbies are cross-country and volleyball. I like to jog in my spare time. # THE 2004 RAHI CLASSES

During the course of the RAHI summer experience, a student attempts between seven and eleven credits, a load nearly equaling that of full-time college students throughout the nation. The paramount goal of RAHI is the formation of a group of young men and women of rural Alaska who have developed skills, work habits, self-awareness, and self-confidence sufficient to enhance their success-- and enjoyment-- in higher educational pursuits.

The design of RAHI's curriculum is responsive to the needs of rural students who have completed their junior or senior year of high school. Core and elective coursework comprise this curriculum. But what, one reasonably may ask, does the RAHI student actually study?

In Methods of Written Communication (ENGL 111X) and University Communications (DEVS 104), the student develops and hones the ability to write. More specifically, the student learns how (and how not) to select, research, organize, and write research papers, essays, and essay examinations, of course. Along the way, the student refines use of grammar, formatting, mechanics, and applications software; and whether he or she likes it or not, the student gains essential practice in oral delivery. These courses operate in conjunction with Study Skills Lab (DEVS 108) and Content Reading (DEVS 108), which develop comprehension, critical thought, and memorization skills required for the student who aspires to succeed in a university environment.

Core classes are supplemented by specialty courses in several disciplines. Biochemistry and Molecular Biology (CHEM 195) explores through lecture and laboratory the central role of chemistry in life with an emphasis on recombinant DNA and biotechnology. In Math Lab (DEVM 106), students undergo rigorous review of advanced algebra, analysis of functions, and computer-assisted image processing. Alaska Native and Native American Psychology (PSY 195) explores Native social systems, religion, and education as they relate to individual and community psychologies. Through lecture, lab, and field study in The Dynamic Earth (GEOS 101X), students explore the materials and geologic processes that shape our planet. And Computer Software Applications (CIOS 105) provides RAHI students with hands-on experience with internet tools, web page development, and digital video to assist them with future academic, professional, and personal projects. The array of our program's courses is broad, and the curricula intensive.

RAHI students, however, don't simply sit around Monday through Friday. They don't simply throw an occasional water balloon, or ride bikes to the library. All RAHIers take activity coursework in Swimming or Native Dance. In the former, students of all levels learn water safety essentials, learn and refine the major strokes, and play water polo-- all while developing a strength and cardiovascular foundation. In the latter course, students learn the traditional dances of a wide range of Native cultures, understand their meanings, and acknowledge the differences among them.

And yet, where would we be in RAHI without tutorials?

Tutoring Keeps RAHlIers On Track

The 2004 RAHI dorm staff and instructors helped make RAHI '04 a great success. Tutoring and mentoring make a big difference in this program. Without the dedicated academic assistance of the staff, many students would lose confidence and some might slip through the cracks or fail. In addition to academic help, the TCs also made sure that the students felt well, and were not homesick. The TCs kept every student on track, and also tried to keep students out of too much trouble. The best thing about the TCs was that they were not only your alternate parent, they will also be your lifetime friends. P.S. They also gave us $TIPENDS. Cool, huh?
