Orion,

When the academic probation policy was changed, it appears that the good standing policy was not changed to correspond...here is the text of the two policies, copied from the 16-17 catalog:

Good Standing

Undergraduate students — You are in good standing if your cumulative GPA and most recent semester GPA are 2.0 or better.

Probation

Undergraduate students — Students whose semester and cumulative GPA falls below 2.0 after any semester, including the summer session, will be put on academic probation. Students on probation may not enroll in more than 13 credits a semester unless an exception is granted by the appropriate dean. Probation may include additional conditions as determined by the dean of the college or school in which the student's major is located. Students on probation will be referred for developmental advising/education and/or to an advising or support counseling center. The student should work with an academic advisor to prepare an academic plan for achieving a higher GPA. Removal from probation requires the student's cumulative and semester GPAs to be at least 2.0.

As it stands this would leave students with a semester GPA below 2.0 but a cum GPA above 2.0 in a gray area; they would not be on probation but they would not be in good standing, either.

To make the policies consistent, I think the good standing policy should be:

Good Standing

Undergraduate students — You are in good standing if your cumulative GPA is 2.0 or better.
